

National Harbor

All smiles on a crab-filled festival day in Inner Harbor

PHOTOS BY LISA M. BOLTON/THE WASHINGTON POST

Not in Baltimore!

National Harbor teemed with thousands of crab lovers Saturday, during the seventh annual Chesapeake Crab & Beer Festival in Baltimore. More than 60,000 freshly steamed and seasoned Chesapeake crabs were up for grabs at the "all-you-care-to-taste" event, which also included craft beers, wines and spirits, local vendors, games of cornhole and live music from Maryland-based band the Piranhas.

ABOVE: Barbara Dorsey gathers with family members from Woodbine, Silver Spring and Olney for an afternoon of bonding and crab-cracking. MIDDLE: A huge ear of corn puts the finishing touch on festivalgoers' platters.

RIGHT: Crustaceans provided by the Crab Depot are poured into heavy-duty plastic totes and delivered to "crab stations."

